

USC Schedules Summer Classes On Communism for Educators

With the opening of a six-week Institute on Communism on June 25, the University of Southern California will chalk up another academic first: the first intensive course in the country designed to aid teachers and school administrators in formulating their own courses of study about Communism.

Goal of the program is to stimulate in teachers an awareness and knowledge of Communism that they will take into their own classrooms in the fall.

Only social science teachers and school administrators may enroll in this high-level course. For six weeks, they will meet daily with political scientists, historians, economists, international relations experts and educators in classes, lectures and forums to examine all facets of Communism.

Communist Strategy and Propaganda, in cooperation with the Schools of Education and International Relations and the Departments of Political Science and Economics.

An outstanding Institute faculty will include Dr. Howard Boorman, director of the research project on Men and Politics in Modern China at Columbia University; Prof. Harold Fisher, professor of international relations, Mills College; Prof. William Georgiades, of the USC School of Education; writer and lecturer Leo Grulio, widely published authority on the Soviet Union.

Dr. Raymond Hutchings, visiting lecturer in economics at the University of Maryland and well-known Soviet authority; Charles Malamuth of USC, recently chief of the Russian Service of the Voice of America in Europe; Gerhart Niemeyer, professor of political science and international relations at the University of Notre Dame; Stefan Posony, Stanford University international relations program director and author of basic works on world revolution; Dr. Carlton C. Rodee, USC professor of political science and contributor to two encyclopedias as well as author of several books on the world scene, and Dr. Rodger Swearingen, associate professor of history and international relations and director of USC's Research Institute on Communist Strategy and Propaganda.
